

Crime/Thriller: THE LAZARUS APP
Pilot written by Tom Freyer & James Moorer

LOGLINE:

In order to nab a shrewd serial killer, a detective with a photographic memory-- and a dying wife-- uses a secret mobile app that lets him glimpse the last images a murder victim saw, unaware that it robs him of his greatest gift: his memory.

COMP: THE WIRE, BLACKLIST

ONE-PAGE:

What if police could see the last thing a victim saw before they were murdered? There's an app for that.

The protagonist is a black Sergeant Detective in his 40s, a rising star in Homicide with a photographic memory and a ticking time-bomb-- his wife is dying of cancer.

To top off his stress, there's a cunning, wealthy vigilante serial killer who never kills the same way twice, and manages to elude the Detective's grasp.

Enter a secret mobile app-- created by an Asian fanboy geek in Cyber Crimes-- that could give him more precious time with his dying wife, by enabling him to see the serial killer's face captured in a murder victim's retina.

There's just one teensy problem. Unbeknownst to the Detective, the app is slowly robbing him of his memories, and also his moral compass.
