Feature length screenplay written by Tom Freyer & Ann Kimbrough

LOGLINE:

When a resentful chemist adds addictive drugs to her estranged mother's billion-dollar cosmetics line, the outcome is anything but pretty.

COMP: THE DEVIL WEARS PRADA

ONE PAGE:

Reese may have graduated magna cum laude in bio-chemistry, but when it comes to human chemistry, she's clueless.

Recent grad Reese lands her dream job: chemist at a billion-dollar cosmetic company, owned by the mother she never knew, a former supermodel. But self-centered mom treats her like a used Q—tip.

So, out for revenge, Reese secretly sabotages the makeup with an addictive chemical, turning the entire world—even men-- into raving makeup junkies.

Meanwhile, her mother starts to like her! Now Reese has to find a solution before they both wind up wearing orange coveralls.

In the savage cosmetics business, everyone's wearing warpaint.
